PADDI MOYER

Born and reared in the Pacific Northwest, bronze sculptor Paddi Moyer makes her home where the high desert of Central Oregon touches the majestic Cascade Mountains. From her studio she can look upon a panorama of rugged peaks and draw some of the mountains' energy into her work.

"My work represents timeless, essential themes: Native people experiencing the blessings of life - rain, earth, sun - as well as contours of the earth's body reflected in sensual shapes of the female form."

The diversity of Paddi's work is exciting. Her distinct style represents the creative edge of a natural. Her widely accepted Indian sculptures are eloquent works of art - spiritual expressions of a culture in passage. The earthy faces of these Natives hold the emotions of a vanishing legacy. The contemporary figures that she creates have also been well received. These flowing images take reality and move with it into a dimension that is not abstract, but is rich and dreamy.

Paddi's work is exhibited and collected throughout the United States, with shows and galleries in Carmel, Cheyenne, Scottsdale, Sedona, Lake Tahoe, Lahaina and Los Angeles.
